Elementary, My Dear Watson is the Mark Moore Gallery's third installment of its annual Ultrasonic International series. The group show features 16 local, national, and international emerging artists who use their personal obsessions as artistic inspiration. (For example, Christine Gray's epic fantasy paintings reveal an imagination run wild.) While encouraging an OCD tendency in a group of already eccentric people might not be the best idea, the result hammers home the idea that regardless of where we live, the crazy in all of us is never far away. - Heather Silva
