

Notes From the Underground | Kalup Linzy

CULTURE | By IO TILLET WRIGHT | June 30, 2011, 5:09 pm

iO Tillett Wright

It was a voyeuristic thrill watching the performance artist and Internet video sensation Kalup Linzy prance around the Boom Boom Room at the Standard Hotel, singing his heart out about his typically provocative subject matter. Clad in a green bathrobe (that had been cut into a dangerously short minidress) and a blond wig, Linzy sauntered barefoot before a relatively stodgy crowd of art-world types, who seemed to clutch their Champagne flutes in confusion. Hosted by Creative Time, the party celebrated the second installment of StandART, the hotel's video art channel, which this time around includes works by Linzy, Terence Koh, Slater Bradley and Allison Schulnik, among others.